hands of parties unknown. hands of parties unknown.

Immediately upon the announcement of the finding of the jury of inquest, James Fletcher, Walter Davis and Joe Davis, the negroes who had been arrested upon suspicion of being implicated in the crime, were released from custody. The inquiry of the coroner's jury leaves the authorities as far away from a solution of the crime as they were on Sunday morning, and it is likely that the party or parties who committed the double crime of murder and arson will never be brought to justice unless they can be traced by possession of the pistol which the victim was known to have in the house, and no trace of which can be found in the ruins of the building.

There was no particle of evidence upon which to hold the Davis negroes, and the only evidence against Fletcher was the tracks of a man leading by rather a devious route from the scene of the crime to a spring within 100 yards of Fletcher's house. A comparison of the tracks found with one made by Fletcher after his arrest showed that the first tracks were not those of the accused man. Immediately upon the announcement

PROGRESS IN BATTLE TRIAL.

Entirely Documentary Evidence Offered by the Prosecution.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

[GREENSBORO, N. C., November 23.

—The evidence presented by the government to-day in the prosecution in the United States court of Lee H. Battie, cashier of the defunct City Nationa; Bank, for alleged false reports and overcrafts, was entirely documentary, consisting of files of the department of the bank's reports and correspondence and the examination of the book and records of the bank, through this principal witness, United States Examiner Fred A. Hull. The government gought to show by Hull that at this time the official reports were made to the comptroller of the bank's financial condition a camparison of the books at these dates showed an entirely different situation. Comparing one report before it was stated that the bank's excess loan limit was nothing, Hull claimed the books showed that on this date the Pomona Manufacturing Company owed the bank over $18,000, whereas the legal limit of 10 per cent. on its capital and surplus would have been $12,500. On cross-examination, Hull admitted that at this time it was the custom of many banks to only report direct loans, under the head of Hull admitted that at this time it was the custom of many banks to only report direct leans, under the head of "excess leans," the indirect leans, such as discounted notes, paper backed by collateral, etc., not being so classed, and that when this report of no excess was made by the bank its Pomona indebtedness had been changed from the direct to the indirect loan class.

The books were also used to establish the charge of large overdrafts, especially of Battle's individual accounts.
